

RU-tv Broadcast Communications Living-Learning Community

If you are interested in video production and broadcasting, this is the community for you! Space is extremely limited!

Located in Winkler Hall on Busch campus, the RU-tv Broadcast Communications Living-Learning Community offers special benefits to its student residents who want to learn about broadcast communications. They will have the opportunity to work and learn in the field while living with students who share common interests. These residents have use of an in-hall professional television studio!

Students in this community will be required to participate in a 1.5-credit course through the School of Communication and Information (SC&I) for both fall and spring semesters during their first year of residence on the floor. The course will focus on television history, programming and viewing, including discussions of television and everyday life, new media, media literacy, genres such as reality television, and historical perspectives on visual images, among other topics. The course will count towards graduation credit for School of Arts and Sciences (SAS) and for the School of Communication and Information (SC&I).

Returning RU-tv Broadcast Communications Living-Learning Community participants will have other curricular opportunities made available to them upon their second, third, or fourth years.

Students in this community have:

- Access to video, sound, and editing equipment
- In-depth training sessions to learn how to use the television equipment
- The opportunity to develop and produce original programming for the university's cable network
- A chance to live and work with a group of passionate students who share an interest in video production
- Special guest speakers and field trips

All Rutgers University-New Brunswick students are welcome to apply and must submit an application that can be found at <http://rutv.rutgers.edu/livinglearning.shtml>. Applications received by May 15, 2010, are guaranteed consideration. Applications will be reviewed and finalists will be required to interview with RU-tv staff during one weekend in May 2010.

This residential opportunity features large suites located in Winkler Hall on the Busch Campus. Not your average residence hall room, each suite has its own bathroom and living room and accommodates six people with two per bedroom. Carpeting, telephone, cable TV, and Internet access are all included.
